

INDOT's Toll Road District

In 1951, the Indiana General Assembly passed legislation creating the Indiana Toll Road Commission. Construction was completed, and the Toll Road opened to traffic in late 1956. Subsequent legislation authorized the Toll Finance Authority to enter into contracts or leases with the Department of Highways (now INDOT) for the operation of all toll road and toll bridge projects, which in 1985, they did for the operation of the Toll Road.

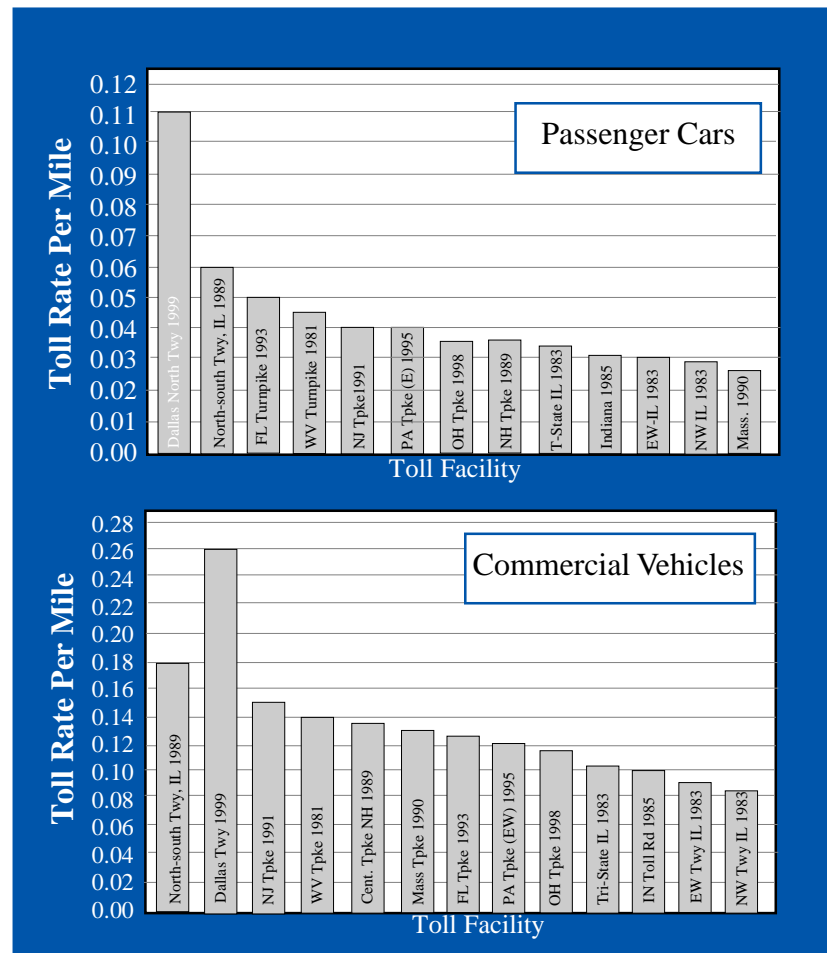

As it is structured today, the Indiana Toll Road is operated and maintained by the INDOT, under the Toll Road Division. The Toll Road Division's Central Office is located in Granger. In 1999, the Toll Road Division was renamed Toll Road District to improve internal communications and operations.

Commercial vs. Passenger Vehicles on Toll Road

Toll Rate Comparisons

The following chart compares Indiana Toll Road rates per-mile with similar toll facilities throughout the United States. The name of the toll road or turnpike and the year in which the last toll rate adjustment was made is included.

Source: Toll Road District